

Intervening early costs less and achieves better outcomes for children and families

If you're working in a service that provides early intervention or help to children, young people and families then 'Early Help Standards' is for you.

This CACHE endorsed learning pathway written specifically to support our children and families workforce will provide a starting point for professional development.

So, if you're new to post, use the standards as part of your induction, or if you're a more experienced practitioner use them to explore and build upon existing knowledge.

They take about 4 months to complete and have been developed around the same essential standards our social workers work to. You'll need to attend the taught sessions detailed overleaf and complete a portfolio of evidence that supports your practice to achieve your certificate of achievement.

If you are working in childcare, youth work, education, health or social care and supporting families in Central Bedfordshire, take advantage of our current offer and complete this course for FREE – a saving of £650.
